++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Scattered showers at first, patchy rain for a time tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
Any remaining showers will die out this evening to leave a mostly dry night with clear spells. A fairly widespread frost developing, although cloud will increase again in the west by morning. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Monday:
Patchy rain or sleet spreading east through the morning, perhaps with some snow in the west at first. Most parts then becoming drier and brighter through the afternoon. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Mostly dry and settled with some bright or sunny spells, but also the risk of isolated showers developing. Chilly overnight with some frost and a few mist or fog patches.
